Can you tell us a story that describes why you feel this way?

- We work alongside each other to get the very inactive more active.
- We work closely with our public health and GP partners to support active referral work which makes a real difference to our residents.
- By working together in partnership with organisations such as Active Together we can bring about the change needed.

What have we learnt by working together during the last 12 months that might shape future priorities?

- Partnership working is key to change however silos still exist in too many areas of health and wellbeing.
- Information on the knowledge, skills and behaviours employers require to help current and future workforce needs.
- The work being done in communities is an area I think will become even more important as we grow the community strand of our work. Collaboration here will be essential.
- Being more targeted and realistic with the resources we have.
- Need to align and protect resources to develop a longer term approach to addressing health inequalities, we are stronger collectively.

Have you discouraged any colleagues from working with Active Together in the last 12 months?

"Active Together are a great example of an organisation that works creatively and collaboratively with others to meet aims."

Describe what needs collective improvement in how we work together moving forward?

- More funding opportunities for the sector/school physical activity as a result of potential cuts.
- For AT to be the conduit for communication between Local Authorities to ensure that all Local Authorities have up to date and robust strategic policies.
- We [the local NHS] need to become a more engaging partner and to share wider the benefits of collaboration with AT towards a shared purpose/goal.
- Link Officers could potentially be better utilised to filter messages down from Active Together and share feedback from Districts.
- On-going evidence of impact of interventions.
- Continuing to raise the profile of the work of the team thus enabling as many individuals and groups across the districts to understand how being active can have such a positive impact on people's lives.
